Our Story

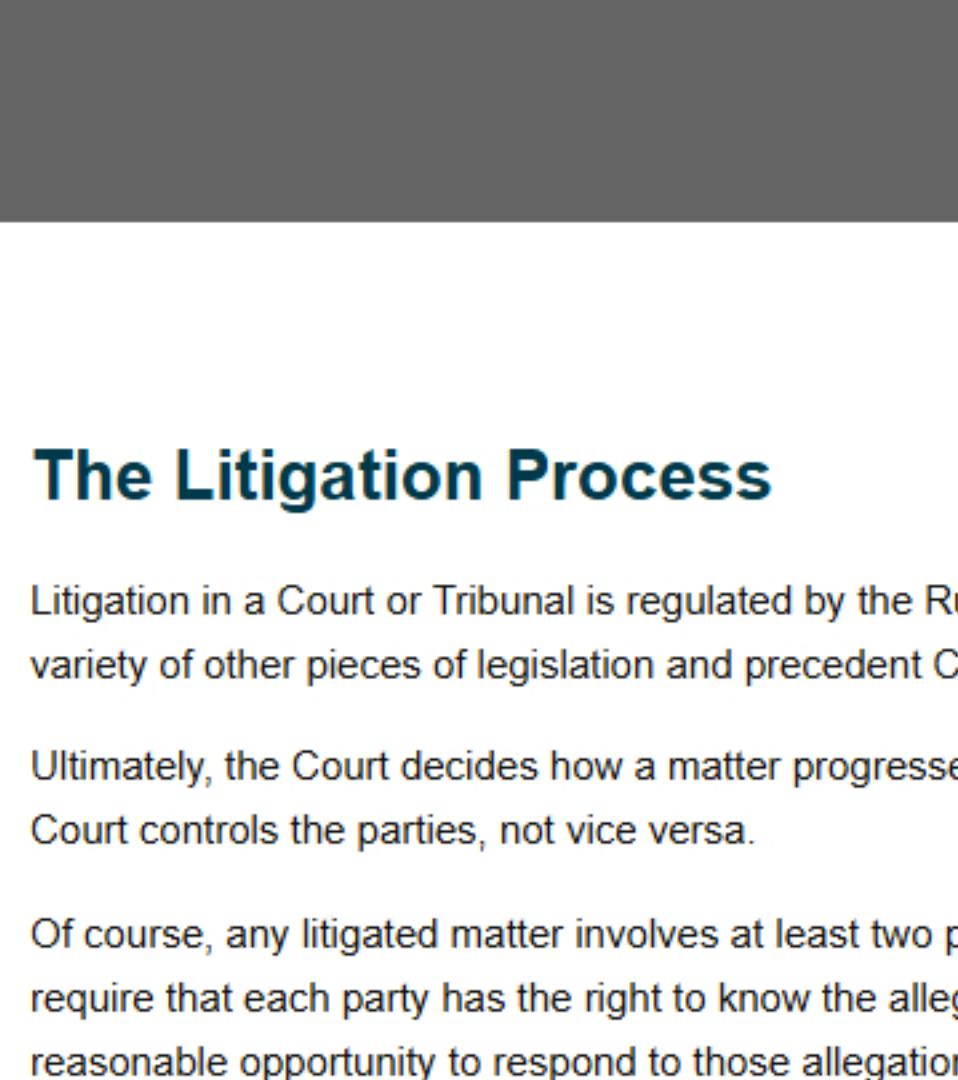

Richard Leahy is the Legal Practitioner Director of Cochrane Leahy Litigation. Richard was a partner in an award winning, national firm, practising in commercial and insurance litigation. Identifying a gap in the Queensland legal market, he has now created his own boutique commercial litigation firm, with an emphasis on expert but commercially pragmatic service for businesses and individuals.

Richard can be contacted on mobile 0421 608 459 or at richard@cochraneleahy.com.au

"Litigation is the pursuit of practical ends, not a game of chess" – Felix Frankfurter, Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, 1939-1962.

The Litigation Process

Litigation in a Court or Tribunal is regulated by the Rules of that Court or Tribunal and a variety of other pieces of legislation and precedent Court decisions.

Ultimately, the Court decides how a matter progresses and what the outcome will be. The Court controls the parties, not vice versa.

Of course, any litigated matter involves at least two parties and the rules of natural justice require that each party has the right to know the allegations of the other party and a reasonable opportunity to respond to those allegations. Each party will also have the opportunity to provide input on procedural steps and the pace at which and how a matter progresses will not be dictated by one party alone.

A litigated proceeding might take 6 months or it might take 6 years. It is hard to predict at the beginning as the attitude of the other party and the Court or Tribunal will not be known before proceedings are commenced and progressed.

The Essential Steps

From the client's point of view, the litigation process will usually involve the following steps:

01 Initial instructions

From your first contact with our firm you will notice the difference. You will brief Richard and he will run your matter. His down to earth manner and experience will put you at ease. Throughout the entire

02 Costs agreement

Cochrane Leahy Litigation is legally required to enter into written costs agreements with its clients. We will provide the proposed agreement as soon as possible and negotiate its terms with you.

03 Commencing litigation

To begin with, Richard will identify your issues and your goals. Most proceedings begin with an Application or Claim. These state the case of the Applicant or Plaintiff. Richard will seek your

04 Defence

The next step is for the Defendant or Respondent to file a Defence or Response. Cochrane Leahy Litigation will seek your relevant documents and instructions and will particularly consider technical

05 Disclosure

Also called Discovery, this process involves the exchange of the parties' relevant documents. In the hands of others, this can be an expensive, drawn out process. Cochrane Leahy Litigation will

06 Expert evidence

It may be necessary to obtain valuation, accounting, town planning, engineering or other expert evidence to support or defend a case. This process, if not properly managed, can

07 Advice

Advice is a continuing process. However, once the above steps are completed, it will usually be possible to provide comprehensive, definitive advice regarding success. Cochrane Leahy

08 Resolution

This is always the ultimate focus of our approach. Cochrane Leahy Litigation understands that the litigation process is merely a pathway to resolving a dispute. Sometimes it is necessary to run

09 Costs

In many jurisdictions, the successful party is likely to be awarded costs against the other party. But that might mean that you recover about two thirds of your actual out of pocket expenditure.

10 Finalisation

Any settlement will be effected and any court orders explained and complied with. Because our policy is so communication driven, your final account will hold no sudden surprises. You will always be

Our Four Point Commitment

Experience the difference of our four point commitment.

- Accountability - the person you instruct is the person who does your work
- Communication - clear, regular and timely
- Simplification - of how we charge and through concise, practical advice
- Value For Money - genuine pricing, and a constant focus on cost/benefit

Think about this four point commitment and compare it with your past experiences with other law firms. If they don't match up, then consider calling Richard for a further explanation of how the four point commitment can work for you.
